JUNIOR SOCCER TEAM FOUND ALIVE IN THAI CAVE

1 Twelve boys and their assistant soccer coach have been found alive by rescuers inside a Thai cave complex nine days after they went missing, Chiang Rai province's governor said on Monday. In video shot by rescuers as the boys were found, flickering torchlight revealed boys clad in shorts and red and blue shirts sitting or standing on the ground in an underground cave beside an expanse of water. "How many of you are there - 13? Brilliant," a member of the multinational rescue team, speaking in English, tells the boys. "You have been here 10 days. You are very strong." "Thank you so much," one of the boys says. The boys, aged between 11 and 16, went missing with the 25-year-old after soccer practice on June 23 after they set out to explore the Tham Luang cave complex in a forest park near by the border with Myanmar. A massive international rescue effort has been under way since, with rescue teams battling through thick mud and high water to try to reach the group in the cave network that stretches 6 miles into a mountain.

NEW CRIMINAL CHARGES AGAINST WEINSTEIN

2 The Manhattan district attorney on Monday announced new criminal charges against film producer Harvey Weinstein, accusing him of sexually assaulting a third woman in addition to the two mentioned in earlier charges. The new indictment accuses Weinstein of forcibly performing oral sex on a woman in July 2006. The new charges, which include predatory sexual assault, carry a sentence of 10 years to life in prison, according to the office of District Attorney Cyrus Vance. Weinstein, 66, once one of Hollywood's most powerful filmmakers, has pleaded not guilty to the first set of charges and has denied ever having non-consensual sex. His lawyer, Benjamin Brafman, could not be reached immediately for comment on Monday. Vance issued a statement about the new charges saying, "This indictment is the result of the extraordinary courage exhibited by the survivors who have come forward. Our investigation continues." More than 70 women — mostly young actresses and women in other aspects of the movie business — have accused Weinstein of sexual misconduct, including rape, in a series of incidents dating back decades.

TRUMP, LOPEZ OBRADOR DISCUSS IMMIGRATION

4 President Donald Trump and Mexico's next leader, Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador discussed immigration, trade and security issues in a phone call on Monday. Lopez Obrador, a 64-year-old former mayor of Mexico City, won a landslide election victory on Sunday, dealing a crushing blow to establishment parties and becoming the first leftist to win the Mexican presidency since one-party rule ended in 2000. Relations between Trump and Lopez Obrador will be closely watched because Trump has regularly criticized Mexico. In comments to reporters, Trump said he believed Lopez Obrador would help the United States secure its southern border."I think the relationship would be a very good one. We'll see what happens, but I really do believe it's going to be a very good one," Trump said. He said that in the phone call, they had touched on a possible trade deal between the United States and Mexico. Shortly afterward, Lopez Obrador gave his account of the call in a Twitter post, saying he had proposed a comprehensive deal to create jobs, lower immigration and improve security.

PWC MUST PAY FDIC $625.3M OVER BANK'S COLLAPSE

5 A federal judge on Monday said PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP must pay $625.3 million in damages to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp for failing to uncover fraud that led to one of the largest bank failures of the global financial crisis. U.S. District Judge Barbara Rothstein found it more likely than not that PwC's negligence was the proximate cause of FDIC damages from the August 2009 demise of Montgomery, Alabama's Colonial BancGroup Inc, once among the 25 largest U.S. banks. Rothstein said PwC failed to uncover a multiyear fraud between Colonial, its former client, and Ocala, Florida-based Taylor, Bean & Whitaker, once the nation's 12th largest mortgage lender and a major Colonial customer. The FDIC sued in its role as receiver for Colonial Bank, which once had more than $25 billion of assets and 340 branches. Taylor Bean also failed in August 2009. Its former chairman, Lee Farkas, is serving a 30-year prison term for his 2011 conviction on fraud and conspiracy charges. Rothstein had found PwC liable for negligence in December, after a non-jury trial, and tried the damages issue in March, also without a jury.

Security amped up ahead of Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular

Here's what you need to know about the public safety efforts for the Fourth of July.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular show draws hundreds and thousands of spectators to the Esplanade each Fourth of July, and local and state officials are increasing security ahead of the popular holiday event.

The security plan for the Boston Pops show includes participation from Massachusetts State Police, Boston Police Department, Boston Fire Department, Boston EMS, Transit Police, Cambridge Police Department, Cambridge Fire Department, FBI, the Department of Homeland Security, the state Fire Marshal's office and the National Guard, said Daniel Bennett, state secretary of Public Safety and Security.

"This is an incredible team effort from public safety, and it starts with the governor and [Boston] mayor working together to make sure everyone has the resources to make sure this is a safe event," Bennett said at a Monday news conference on the Esplanade. "The planning has gone into this for months. It's the same type of plan, but not the same plan, we've had for years — it improves every year as we learn from past experiences."

Bennett said there is no credible threat to the Boston area for the Fourth but added that the public is the "most important intelligence tool." Bennett advises anyone among the thousands who are expected to attend the event to immediately alert an officer or find an official if they see any suspicious activity.

Prohibited items include coolers on wheels, backpacks, weapons, drones, glass containers, pre-mixed beverages, grills, alcohol, marijuana and bicycles. All liquids must be in sealed plastic containers, officials said, and cannot exceed two liters.

Because some roads will be closed on the Fourth, Mayor Marty Walsh advised residents to bike to the event even though bicycles won't be allowed through security checkpoints. He also suggested walking or taking public transportation as an alternative to driving.

"Boston is excited for the 2018 Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular, it's one of best holiday traditions we have here. There's no better place to celebrate the independence than the place where it all began," Walsh said. "Safety is the most important thing for all of us so whether you're watching the fireworks on the Esplanade or attending Harbor Fest or having a cookout in your neighborhood, we're asking you to be safe."

With a heat wave lingering throughout Massachusetts this week, Walsh reminded residents to stay hydrated, check on elderly neighbors and call 911 concerning homeless individuals outside.

Fireworks are illegal in Massachusetts, Walsh also cautioned. Police will be in force throughout the Boston area on the Fourth.

"Leave the fireworks to the professionals," Walsh said. "The last thing we want to do is lock people up for setting fireworks off. They are illegal."

More details on road closures, access points, prohibited items and safety for the Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular can be found at bostonpopsjuly4th.org/event-details or at Metro.us.

Original Declaration of Independence on display this Fourth of July

The agreement will be in Boston on Wednesday.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Boston was one of the epicenters of the American Revolution and now, a piece of that history is coming back for the Fourth of July.

One of the 14 original copies of the Declaration of Independence will be on display at the Massachusetts Archives and Commonwealth Museum in Boston this Independence Day.

This rare document was sent by the Continental Congress to Massachusetts during the Revolutionary War, according to Secretary of the Commonwealth William F. Galvin's office, and was printed at Mary Katherine Goddard's shop in Baltimore.

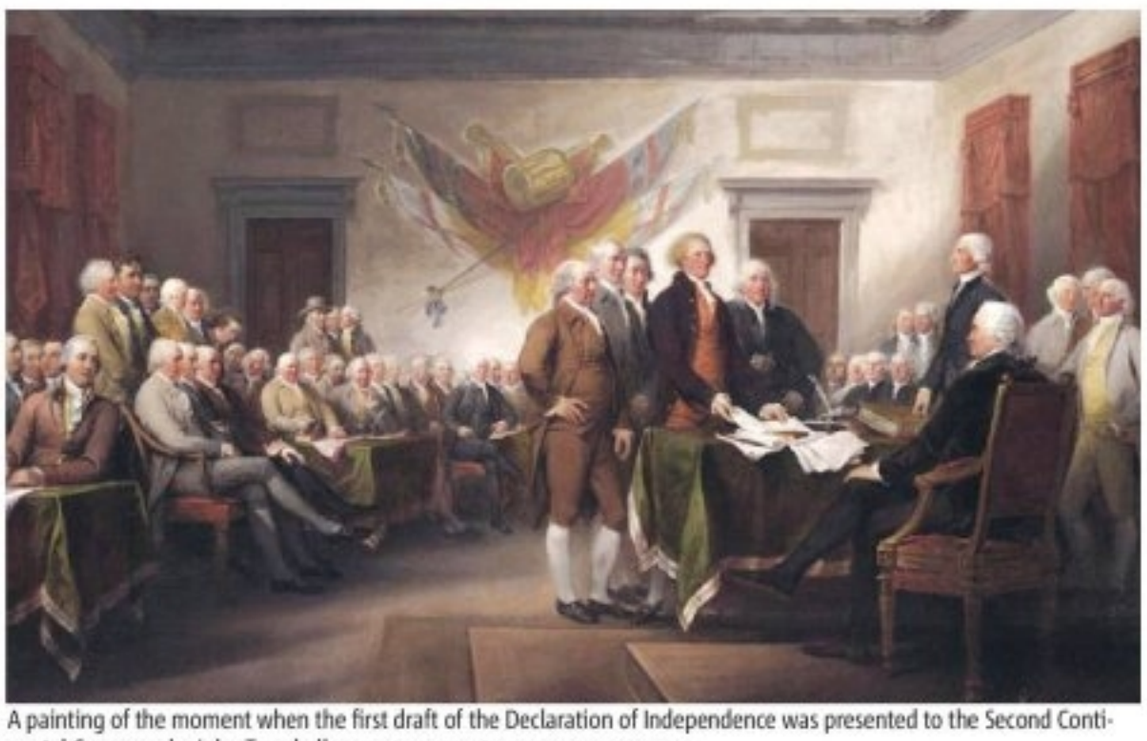
This copy includes the famous signature of John Hancock, president of the Continental Congress and one of Massachusetts's own prominent patriots. It will be on display from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the Fourth.

"It is our country's first international agreement and recognized the United States as an independent nation."

Galvin's office

Along with the Declaration of Independence, patriotic patrons of the museum on the Fourth of July will have the chance to see an exclusive showing of two more historic national treasures: the Treaty of Watertown and a letter to the Massachusetts General Court from George Washington.

The Treaty of Watertown was signed just weeks after the Declaration of Independence on July 19, 1776, by representatives of the Mi'kmaq and St. John (Maliseet) nations of northern New England and Canada. It is, according to Galvin's office, "our country's first international agreement and recognized the United States as an independent nation."



A painting of the moment when the first draft of the Declaration of Independence was presented to the Second Continental Congress, by John Trumball. IIP PHOTO ARCHIVE / FLICKR CREATIVE COMMONS

In the letter, which will be shared during a one-time display, George Washington details how Congress has "asserted the claims of the American Colonies to the rights of Humanity and declared them Free and Independent States."

The Commonwealth Museum is located at 220 Morrissey Blvd. at Columbia Point in Dorchester. Admission and parking are free.

Celebrate the Fourth of July with the Boston Pops. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Everything you need to know about the Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular

Get ready for this year's Fourth of July festivities.

MATT JUUL
matthew.juul@metro.us

There's no better way to celebrate Independence Day in the Hub than at the annual Boston Pops 4th of July fireworks show and concert. The iconic festivities, which draws crowds numbering in the hundreds of thousands each year, have also become a national event thanks to television broadcasts and digital live streams of the show. Whether you plan to party along the Esplanade or tuning in at home, here's everything you need to know about the 2018 Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular.

What time does it start?

If you plan on seeing the Boston Pops 4th of July fireworks show in person, you better head to the festivities early. Spots near the concert at the DCR Hatch Shell are available on a first-come, first-served basis and fill up quick, with gates opening to the public at 9 a.m. The music-filled show won't kick off until 8 p.m. on Wednesday night, while the fireworks will sparkle over the Charles River beginning at 10:30 p.m.

Where to watch

Located on Boston's Esplanade, the DCR Hatch Shell is the annual home of the Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular. Fans who decide to attend the show in person are allowed to bring a number of items to make their viewing experience more relaxing, including blankets, tarps, pop-up tents and canopies without sides that are a maximum of 10' by 10' in size, as well as folding beach chairs. Coolers without wheels are allowed too, but leave the grills, backpacks and other prohibited items at home.

For spectators who don't want to deal with the crowds at the DCR Hatch Shell, there are a number of other viewing locations around the city. The lawns at MIT in Cambridge are a nice spot to watch the action and are usually not as crowded. Meanwhile, the Rose Kennedy Greenway will host a live screening of the festivities on a giant outdoor screen. If you plan to splurge for an extravagant Independence Day celebration, make a reservation at the Top of the Hub for a bird's eye view of the fireworks, accompanied by a five-course dinner and a live stream of the concert.

Rachel Platten will perform at this year's show.

How to tune in from home

Don't feel like heading outdoors for this year's show? Tune in from home instead. Bostonians can watch live on WHDH while fans across the country can check out the concert and fireworks over at Bloomberg Television if they have DISH or DirectTV. There will be a number of websites streaming the action online as well, including Bloomberg.com, Boston.com, BostonGlobe.com and bostonpopsjuly4th.org.

Who's performing?

As per tradition, a number of musical stars will join conductor Keith Lockhart and the Boston Pops orchestra for the 4th of July concert. This year's headliner is Bay State native and "Fight Song" star Rachel Platten. The show will also include performances by the Indigo Girls, Rhiannon Giddens, Rita Moreno, Natalie Cortez and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

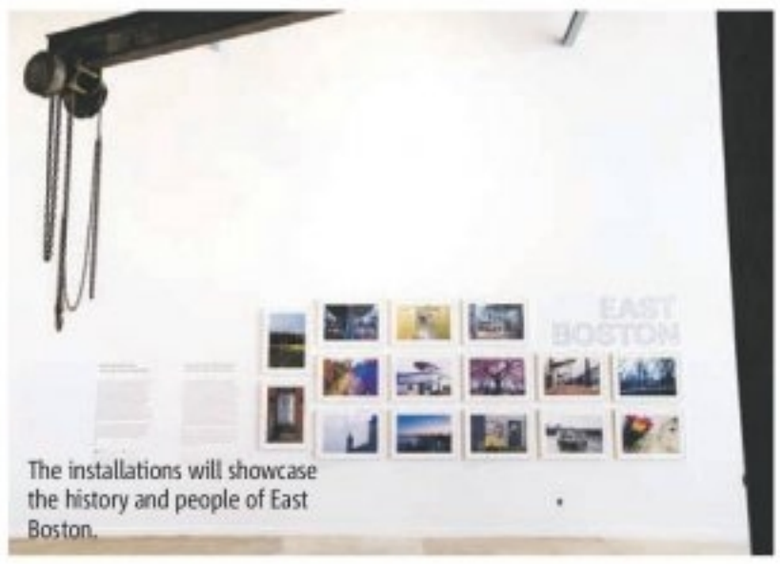
The ICA's Watershed location debuts July 4. ALL PHOTOS LIZA VOLL PHOTOGRAPHY

Visitors can take ferries from the ICA's Seaport location to the Watershed throughout the summer.



The installations will showcase the history and people of East Boston.

ICA Watershed: A new space for art in East Boston

Here's what to expect at the ICA's new waterfront location.

ELIE LEVINE
letters@metro.us

Don't miss the newest addition to Boston's burgeoning art scene this summer. The Watershed, the Institute for Contemporary Art's new extension in East Boston, is set to open to the public July 4.

Located in a former copper pipe and sheet metal factory in the active Boston Harbor Shipyard and Marina, the Watershed connects the Seaport with Eastie and is expected to bring thousands of visitors to the once-isolated neighborhood. From Memorial Day to Columbus Day, an ICA-contracted ferry will bring visitors directly from the ICA's Seaport location to East Boston in six minutes, a ride that's free with your admission, and entry to the Watershed comes at no extra cost.

"Central to the museum's vision for art and civic life, the new Watershed will create immersive encounters with the art and issues of our time, be a center for social experiences and community-based education, and catalyze explorations of the environment, equity and social justice," says Margaux Leonard, the ICA's public relations manager.

The Watershed's installations are intended to bring to light the history of East Boston. The informational Shipyard Gallery is the first room visitors enter. There's a map of the neighborhood, plaques with information on the history of the area and a video montage of authentic interviews with people who have called East Boston home. As a haven for immigrants, an industrial community and a shipbuilding hub, the area has many stories to tell.

Since moving to its current waterfront home in 2006, the ICA has attempted to deepen the connection between art and civic life in Boston.

"The Watershed makes a cross-harbor connection central to the ICA's notion of art and civic life, and continues our decades-long history of activating and ensuring public access to the waterfront," Leonard explains.

The Watershed's inaugural installation is Diana Thater's "Delphine," a set of videos of swimming dolphins projected on the walls and floor of the Watershed. A nearby "video wall" projects an image of the sun. On the floor, six screens display a disjointed image of a butterfly. "A Runaway World" and "As Radical As Reality," video installations in an adjacent room, showcase the lives of critically endangered rhinoceroses and elephants with footage from Kenya. The "Day for Night" installations depict slowly moving images of flowers. Thater also installed rainbow filters on the Watershed's skylight, giving visitors the feeling that they're walking through an ethereal space.

The Watershed's back room, the Harbor Room, is a designated gathering space, with sets of chairs and family-friendly books on loan from the Boston Public Library. It also features an exhibit of portraits taken by East Boston teenagers. The room opens out onto an outdoor patio with a view of Boston Harbor.

Throughout the summer, the Watershed will put on programs like free tours in Spanish, informal conversations and storytelling for kids.

CELTICS VS. LAKERS: IT'S ON!

OPINION

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is the Executive Sports Editor and a columnist at Metro US. Follow him on Twitter @burke_metro

Simply put: It's the way the NBA should be.

Celtics – Lakers. Bad blood.

During the latest incarnation of the best rivalry in basketball, the Celtics' Big 3 of Paul Pierce, Kevin Garnett and Ray Allen went toe-to-toe with Kobe Bryant, Pau Gasol and dudes like Ron Artest, Lamar Odom and Andrew Bynum. It was fun but it lacked a lot of the pure vitriol that was exhibited when Larry Bird and Co. went up against Magic Johnson and Co. in the 1980s. Plus, the recent era of the rivalry was never really resolved – with the Celtics winning the 2008 NBA Finals in six games and the Lakers winning the 2010 NBA Finals in seven games.

This next era of Celtics – Lakers?

It could be the best yet. Seriously.

Wilt and Russell never had beef like LeBron and Kyrie have beef. Sure, LeBron and Kyrie were all kissy-kissy at the All-Star game in February. But we have never really gotten the full story of why the two were engaged in a passive-aggressive social media brawl – the likes of which would make even your 13-year-old niece Brittany blush - for months on end last year.

Something weird went on in Cleveland in 2017. I'm convinced of it. The Cavs didn't just trade a 25-year-old Top 10 player in his prime last summer because they wanted to appease LeBron (how'd that work out by the way?). There was something there that was irreconcilable with LeBron and Kyrie.

We never got a full dose of LeBron vs. Kyrie this past season as there was a pall cast over the Celtics showdown with the Cavs on opening night when Gordon Hayward went down with that gruesome season-ending injury. The rest of the meetings were met with a collective "what if?" from Celtics fans as injuries – including one to Kyrie himself – ultimately spelled the team's doom.

We don't know for sure yet if a fully healthy Kyrie-led team can beat a fully-healthy LeBron-led team, though we got a pretty good taste in the Eastern Finals when the Celtics were minutes away from disposing of Bron Bron without their best two players. Gotta think that if either Kyrie or Hayward were there, the Celtics would have been the team to earn the right to be swept by the Warriors.

Anyway, LeBron v. Kyrie is about to take a big step up in terms of drama, as the stage this drama will be played out on now is the biggest stage in the history of basketball: Celtics versus Lakers.

The way it should be.

NBA free agency

The two defensive stalwarts of the Celtics of 2015-17, Marcus Smart and Avery Bradley, are two of the top guards remaining on the NBA free agent market.

The Celtics don't have much wiggle room to sign one player in free agency right now – let alone two, so it's highly unlikely that both players would be back in green this coming season. That said, many other contenders who would have interest in Smart and Bradley are cash-strapped as well. If either player is going to take a discount on a short commitment – one would think Boston would be the destination.

The Warriors, who somehow are circumventing the salary cap at every turn, are said to be interested in landing Bradley in NBA free agency.

"The Warriors are projected to be paying an extra $3.25 per dollar tax by the time they're making decision about the supporting cast," USA Today's Sam Amick wrote. "As such, a player who was given their entire taxpayer mid-level exception of $5.3 million would actually cost $22.5 million. A minimum salary addition of $2.3 million, by comparison, would cost approximately $7.1 million (the NBA-only taxes approximately $1.5 million on minimum deals).

"Golden State has discussed Avery Bradley as an option, which comes as no surprise to anyone who has seen the eight-year veteran hound the Warriors' scorers these past few years."

Bradley met with the Clippers on Sunday, and it's most likely that he'll re-sign in LA. The Clippers also met with Kentavious Caldwell-Pope on Sunday, but he was quickly scooped up by the Lakers – which means Bradley is the Clippers' top priority right now.

Meanwhile, Smart's best play is to come back to the Celtics for next season and to then try his hand as an unrestricted free agent next summer. The market for Smart is already dry. The Kings have the money to sign him, but haven't been linked to him seriously yet. The Thunder have been mentioned as a possible landing spot but don't have the money after re-signing Paul George.
